DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 5-7, 9-11, 13, and 18-20 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

3. Claims 5-7, 9-11, 13, and 18-19 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Policappelli (2003/0167048).

4. Policappelli discloses a tampon comprising an insertion end 11, a withdrawal end 15, longitudinal and radial axes, and an outer surface, as shown in figure 1. The tampon comprises a core of cotton material, as disclosed in paragraph [0019], which is a fibrous material. With respect to the compression of the core, it is noted that the cotton material of the tampon inherently has some degree of compression, and since the present claims to not disclose a quantitative degree of compression, the cotton material of Policappelli is considered to fulfill the claimed limitations of highly compressed. The first surface area of the tampon adjacent the insertion end 11 comprises a plurality of depressions located between protuberances 17 and 18, as shown in figure 5. The depressions are generally square in shape, and are evenly spaced in a checkerboard pattern, as shown in figure 5. The protuberances 17 and 18 are arranged in a pattern of evenly spaced diagonal lines, as shown in figure 5. The second surface area of the tampon, adjacent the withdrawal end 15, is free of the protuberances and depressions, as shown in figure 5.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claim 20 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Policappelli (2003/0167048) in view of Leutwyler et al. (5,911,712).

7. Policappelli discloses all aspects of the claimed invention with the exception of a finger indent. Leutwyler discloses a tampon having a finger indent at the withdrawal end, as shown in figure 3, to allow for easy insertion of the tampon. It would therefore be obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of invention to provide the tampon of Policappelli with a finger indent, as taught by Leutwyler, to allow for easy insertion of the tampon.

Conclusion

8. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. The prior art of record discloses tampons having protuberances and depressions.
